Rome, 28.12.2018 [ENA]

In accordance with Article 3.5 of the Treaty on European Union, in its relations with the wider world, the Union supports and promotes its values and interests contributing to the protection of its citizens. The European Union contributes to peace, security, the sustainable development of the Earth, solidarity and mutual respect among peoples, free and fair trade, eradication of poverty and the protection of human rights, in particular the rights of the child, as well as to the rigorous observance and the development of international law, including respect for the principles of the United Nations Charter.

In accordance with Article 21 of the Treaty on European Union, the Union shall pursue reliability between the different areas of its external action and between these and its other policies, as well as it shall work for a high degree of cooperation in all fields of international relations, including its cultural dimension.While the policy framework for EU development cooperation is laid down in the Lisbon Treaty, the 2030 Agenda on Sustainable Development, and the Paris Climate Agreement, the global context for EU action is the

There are a wide array of actions and programs (both thematic and geographic) utilized by the European Union in its development cooperation. And it's important to highlight the roles played by civil society in policy dialogue on these instruments and programs, and in their implementation.

particular focus on the development-related instruments and programs.
The EU budget for development cooperation is divided into different funding instruments, which provide the legal basis for the implementation of the various programs. Some of these funding instruments have a geographical focus, and some a thematic one. Each instrument is then divided into different programs: some are country-specific, some region-specific, and some thematic.

Notably, the DCI (Development Cooperation Instrument) includes both geographical and thematic programs.
The European Development Fund (EDF) provides the EU's largest amount of funding to one geographical area (Africa, the Caribbean and the Pacific region). It is a separate fund which is managed outside the framework of the EU's general budget and funded by the member states on the basis of negotiated voluntary contributions.
